"One of the finest recitals in this writer's memory...Power and dexterity...pure musical enjoyment," reported The Richmond (VA) Times-Dispatch. Il Tempo in Rome praised her performance as "...brilliant and poetic! The concert ended with tumultuous applause."

Her début CD includes works by Scarlatti, Bach/Busoni, Guastavino, Schumann and Ned Rorem, who wrote: "not only my piece, but all the others, are played with care, understanding and prowess." Her Schumann CD on the Eroica label has received accolades for her passionate and sensitive interpretations. Renowned British pianist Peter Katin said: "Her Schumann has to be one of the most imaginative performances I have heard." And Bill Rosen, music critic, wrote: "Marta Felcman's dashing romantic spirit and splendid virtuosity...announced her as a significant pianist with the fire of Argerich and the discipline of Kissin."

Marta Felcman started piano studies at the age of four with Hubert Brandenburg and later with Hebe Brandenburg in her native Argentina. Her musical development was influenced by a succession of distinguished teachers, most notably Hans Graf at the Musikhochschule in Vienna, Peter Katin, Rosalyn Tureck, and Eteri Andjaparidze. Continuing that tradition, Felcman also gives master classes.

Marta Felcman was invited to perform at the McLean, Virginia home of Senator Edward Kennedy to honor Raul Alfonsin, the former Argentine President, Champion of Human Rights. She has donated numerous performances in benefit concerts and is committed to fostering children's musical education.

Born in Buenos Aires, Marta Felcman has lived in New York City since 1983. An avid runner, she jogs in Central Park and when touring brings her running shoes along with her repertoire.
